I. INTRODUCTION

New Jersey residents with even a casual interest in their local government are likely to be well aware of the municipality, school district and county in which they reside. But there are other units of local government in the state – nearly 600 of them – that serve millions of residents but whose existence is less obvious.

These units of government, referred to generally in this report as local agencies, often receive less public attention than municipal governments and boards of education. They frequently make their way into the public eye only in the event of a scandal or other impropriety. Yet their impact on the lives of New Jersey residents can be far-reaching and substantial.

These local agencies, for example, may supply water, dispose of and recycle waste and control pollution in the air. They maintain parks, repair bridges and operate ports. They provide and manage government-funded housing and seek to protect lives and property in the event of a fire.

The powers bestowed on many of these local agencies are expansive. Some have the ability to acquire land and property on the public's behalf or to build local infrastructure. Others invest public dollars to finance economic development projects. Others can charge tolls and fees to commuters or provide tax exemptions to businesses. The common element among these agencies is that their operations and personnel are funded by New Jersey residents and taxpayers.

This report catalogues these myriad local agencies and analyzes the level of transparency they provide to the public regarding their operations and finances. In so doing, this report aims to serve as a guide for citizens who want to learn more about and increase their involvement in the operation of their government. Ultimately, it is the goal of this report to bring greater transparency to government operations, since, as the late U.S. Supreme Court Justice Louis Brandeis once wrote, “Sunshine is . . . the best of disinfectants.”

II. CATALOGUING NEW JERSEY'S LOCAL AGENCIES

Our review identified 587 local agencies in New Jersey with independent fiscal authority and responsibility for the expenditure of public funds. These local agencies consist of:

- 214 local authorities and commissions, which operate as independent government entities and are created by law to carry out a specifically designated task or set of tasks. Examples include a combination of county, regional and municipal improvement authorities, sewerage authorities, pollution control authorities, utilities authorities, parking authorities, bridge commissions, water commissions, redevelopment authorities and port authorities.

- 185 fire districts, which conduct fire prevention activities and provide fire protection. New Jersey's fire districts have independent legal status, bonding authority and fiscal independence.
- 85 housing authorities, which carry out federal housing initiatives on the local level through the acceptance and administration of federal funds in order to provide housing for qualifying families.
- 48 joint insurance funds (JIFs), which provide local government units the option of jointly insuring against liability, property damage, workers' compensation and other claims from third parties.
- 17 workforce investment boards (WIBs), which oversee workforce programs by directing funding and providing information concerning employment and career development. Each WIB operates a One-Stop Career Center which provides access to an array of job training, education and employment services.

- 15 soil conservation districts, which administer a variety of programs aimed at supporting agricultural industries in the state. These districts develop conservation plans for farmland and serve a regulatory role by implementing the state's erosion control laws on construction and development sites.
- 11 urban enterprise zone development corporations (UEZs), which distribute incentives designed to encourage capital investment and restore economic viability within each of the designated communities that encompasses the zones. The state sales tax is reduced by half in urban enterprise zones and then rededicated to economic development projects. Unlike municipal UEZs, which are not included in this report because they are subject to municipal direction, urban enterprise zone development corporations generally are independent of municipal control.
- 7 regional health commissions, each of which is empowered to provide public health services within the geographic area of its participating municipalities. Each health commission is empowered with regulatory authority and may alter, modify or repeal certain local ordinances within its jurisdiction.

- 5 county parks commissions, which contract for the construction and maintenance of parks. While they are connected to the government of the county in which they operate, these commissions are able, for example, to incur their own debt.

We used several methodologies and sources to assist in identifying and cataloguing these local agencies, including information provided by other state departments. Adding each of the local agencies catalogued in this report to the state's 566 municipalities, 604 school districts, and 21 county governments, as well as New Jersey's series of state government entities, yields more than 1,900 units of government operating in the state. This equates to one government unit for every 3.8 square miles, creating layers of government that are difficult for even the most attentive members of the public to monitor.

There are also financial costs associated with operating such a multi-layered government. The operation of a government entity requires the expenditure of public dollars. For example, individual government units each contract for services, ranging from construction needs to independent audits, and hire personnel, such as administrators, attorneys and clerical staff. Where a multitude of independent government entities exist within a prescribed geographical area, those costs can become duplicative or overlapping. See, e.g., Christopher Berry, "Piling On: Multilevel Government and the Fiscal Common Pool," American Journal of Political Science, Vol. 52, No. 4 (Oct. 2008) (discussing problem of "overfishing" from shared tax base and resulting higher taxes and government spending).

To bring perspective to the amount of public funds being expended by the local agencies described above, we reviewed the 2008 Comprehensive Annual Financial Reports (CAFRs) for selected agencies. The CAFR, which is required by law, provides a detailed picture of a government unit's finances and operations.

To determine which CAFRs to select for review, we categorized the local agencies by type (e.g., local authorities, fire districts, etc.). Within each category, or stratum, we then selected a random sample of 10 percent. In this case, selected for CAFR review were 21 local authorities and commissions, 19 fire districts, 9 housing authorities, 5 joint insurance funds, 2 workforce investment boards, 2 soil conservation districts, 1 county parks commission, 1 regional health commission and 1 urban enterprise zone development corporation. We reviewed the CAFR report for each of these 61 agencies to determine their total expenditures and overall debt. (A specific listing of the 61 sampled entities appears in Appendix A to this report).

Our review found that in 2008, the total expenditures for the 61 sampled agencies were $588,893,257 and their total debt was $556,801,143. If the results found from the analysis of the sample hold true for the entire population of the 587 local agencies, overall expenditures on an annual basis and total debt each could be estimated to exceed $5 billion.

We also reviewed records of these 587 local agencies as maintained by the state's Division of Pensions and Benefits. Those records reveal that there are more than 10,000 employees in the New Jersey pension system working at the local agencies catalogued in this report.

III. ANALYZING TRANSPARENCY DATA FOR LOCAL AGENCIES

A. Presence of website and agency contact information

In view of the number of local agencies we identified and the amount of public funds spent to maintain their operations, we sought to examine the transparency of those operations. We first determined if these agencies maintain a website. Establishing such a presence on the internet is a relatively inexpensive and simple way to provide the public with access to an extensive amount of information. In an era in which businesses, governments and elected officials employ a variety of means to convey information through the internet, the construction of a website often is a basic first step. Creation of such a website also may yield cost savings for government agencies, as residents use the website for information instead of calling or visiting the agency in person. See Scott M. Alexander, "Websites Will Become a Key Municipal Service," New Jersey Municipalities, Vol. 88, No. 1, at 9 (Jan. 2011).

In undertaking our review of local agency websites, credit was given to agencies that maintained either an independent website or, at a minimum, a page on the website of a related municipal or county government. We then determined if basic agency contact information, such as a phone number, was provided on the agency's website or webpage. We also provided credit in this category if such contact information was found in an on-line directory maintained by a related municipal or county government, even if the local agency itself did not have a website or webpage. We engaged in this review over the past year. The results of the review are set forth in Table 1 on the following page.

Table 1: Presence of Websites and Availability of Contact Information

Type of Government Entity	Number of such public entities	Number that maintain a website	Number that provide contact information
Local Authorities	214	158	171
Fire Districts	185	79	77
Housing Authorities	85	53	60
Joint Insurance Funds	48	36	27
Workforce Investment Boards	17	17	17
Soil Conservation Districts	15	12	13
Urban Enterprise Zones	11	10	10
Regional Health Commissions	7	7	6
County Parks Commissions	5	5	5
Total	587	377	386

As indicated in Table 1, more than one-third (36 percent) of New Jersey’s local agencies do not maintain a website or webpage. Similarly, more than one-third (34 percent) do not provide basic contact information online, either on their own website or on a website maintained by a related government entity.

New Jersey’s housing authorities and fire districts fared particularly poorly when it came to establishing a web presence. Approximately 38 percent of the state’s housing authorities do not maintain a website, which would facilitate accessing important housing-related services. Approximately 57 percent of New Jersey’s fire districts do not maintain a website, although this is ameliorated somewhat by the fact that some individual fire stations within each fire district maintain their own websites. Finding someone to contact at joint insurance funds may also be problematic. Approximately 44 percent of JIFs do not provide such contact information.

In contrast, all of the state’s workforce investment boards, regional health commissions and county parks commissions maintain a web-site presence, with nearly all including contact information.

B. Examining the local agency websites

After identifying which local agencies maintain a website, we then determined how many of those websites provide basic information about agency operations and finances. Specifically, we examined the following four areas:

- Meetings – We determined if the agency posts meeting information on its website. To be deemed fully compliant, the agency needed to post a meeting schedule, an agenda for its upcoming meeting and minutes of previous meetings. To be deemed partially compliant, the agency needed to make information available for at least one of those three categories.
- Financial Reports – We determined if the agency provides transparency concerning its financial status by making its CAFR, a CAFR synopsis or similar financial information available.
- Responsible Officials – We determined if the agency provides the name of at least one official employed at the agency who is responsible for the agency’s actions.

- Mission Description – We determined if the agency provides a statement that explains its mission and/or responsibilities.

The results of these inquiries are set forth in Table 2 on the following page.

Table 2: Information Provided on Local Agency Websites

Type of Government Entity	Number of Websites	Complete Meeting Information	Partial Meeting Information Only	Financial Reports Posted	Responsible Official(s) Listed	Mission Description Provided
Local Authorities	158	7	103	7	140	97
Fire Districts	79	4	38	3	74	57
Housing Authorities	53	2	21	1	42	40
JIFs	36	7	15	4	35	21
WIBs	17	6	8	0	15	17
Soil Conservation Districts	12	0	3	0	12	12
UEZs	10	1	4	0	8	8
Regional Health Commissions	7	1	3	0	7	7
County Parks Commissions	5	1	3	0	5	4
Total	377	29	198	15	338	263

In sum, our review found that even when local agencies establish websites, those websites often lack basic and significant information. A high percentage of local agencies do not take appropriate steps to keep the public informed of their operations and actions.

For example, local agencies did an almost universally poor job posting financial information. Of the 377 agencies with a web presence, only 15 (4 percent) posted a CAFR or similar report on their website. If those government units without a website are included in this analysis, such financial information is available on websites of only 3 percent of all local agencies.

Local agencies fared only slightly better when it came to providing complete information about their public meetings. Of the agencies with a website, only 8 percent post the schedule, agendas and minutes of their public meetings. Another 53 percent of those agencies make one of those three documents available on the web, with the majority of those posting a meeting schedule and nothing else. The remaining 40 percent of local agencies do not post any meeting information at all. The failure to post such basic operational and financial information can contribute to these agencies operating without needed public scrutiny.

Our review also found:

- Of the 587 local agencies, only seven satisfied all of the transparency measures tested as part of this report.
- Approximately 30 percent of local agencies with a website fail to offer a description of the agency's mission or responsibilities.
- Of the agencies with a website, more than 89 percent provide the name of a responsible official.
- As a group, workforce investment boards had the best performance in providing meeting information. WIBs posted at least a meeting schedule, agenda or minutes on 82 percent of their websites and all three types of meeting information on 35 percent of those websites.

A complete list of how each of the 587 local agencies fared in each of the transparency categories is provided in Appendix B to this report.

IV. CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

The large number of local agencies in New Jersey has financial repercussions and adds layers of government that are difficult for the public to monitor.

We estimate that the overall expenditures and the combined debt of New Jersey's 587 local agencies each exceeds $5 billion. Particularly in light of these public expenses, New Jersey's local agencies should make a stronger effort to keep the public informed of their operations. New Jersey residents are entitled to information regarding the operations, finances, public meetings and leadership of all government entities funded with public dollars.

Our review found that more than one-third of these local agencies do not maintain a website or webpage. Further, we found that the websites that do exist consistently lack vital information. For example, the vast majority of local agencies do not provide basic information about their finances and the public meetings they hold. All government entities should take the simple steps necessary to make such information available.

Specifically, we recommend that all local agencies establish a website. State government officials should facilitate and encourage the creation of such websites. We recommend that such websites include the following:

- Detailed financial information, including a link to the entity's most recent Comprehensive Annual Financial Report or similar financial information.
- A schedule of public meeting dates, agendas for future public meetings and the minutes of prior meetings.
- A description of the entity's mission and responsibilities.
- Basic contact information, including the name and phone number of a responsible official.

Agencies should adopt these recommendations to provide an appropriate level of transparency to the public whom they serve.
