

Handling Public Health Emergencies

The information in this brochure can help you cope with anxiety related to public health emergencies.

It is natural to be upset when you think the health – or the health of your loved ones - is threatened.

Pay attention to your own feelings and take care of your own emotional needs. You can better help friends and family members handle their concerns.

Uncertainty

Anxiety can be related to fear of the unknown. It is normal to feel anxious and worried about a spreading disease, especially if there is no known cause or cure.

Everyone reacts differently to a public health risk. These are normal reactions:

Physical

headaches tiredness increased pulse high blood pressure changes in appetite unexplained aches or pains trouble sleeping stomach aches

Emotional

panic anxiety distrust
fear
anger irritability sadness depression
blame feeling overwhelmed increased stress

Mental

troubling concentrating problems at work or school memory problems troubling thoughts concern about health issues

Behavioral

avoiding others substance abuse excessive cleaning or washing being overly cautious

Here are some ways you can cope with stress and anxiety:

- Limit your exposure to graphic news stories
- Get accurate, timely information from reliable sources
- Educate yourself about the specific health hazard
- Maintain your normal daily routine, if possible
- Exercise, eat well and rest
- Stay active – physically and mentally
- Stay in touch with family and friends
- Find comfort in your spiritual and personal beliefs
- Keep a sense of humor
- Share your concerns with others

Stay Connected

The fear associated with a public health emergency can push people apart.

People who are normally close to family and friends may avoid contact because they are afraid they might get sick or get someone else sick.

It is important to stay connected with others. Use the phone, e-mail, or other electronic means of communication.

If you are anxious about a health risk, talk to someone who can help. This may be your doctor, a family member, friend, member of the clergy, teacher or mental health professional.

If you notice a big change in a loved one, friend or co-worker, reach out to them. Make some time to talk. Watching out for others shows you care. It can be comforting to both of you.

If you or someone you know is having a hard time managing their emotions, seek help from a medical or mental health professional.

Get Reliable Information
