The History of the New Jersey National Guard (Part 4)

Between Independence And Rebellion

In the years between the end of the Revolution and the start of the Civil War, the militia was not inactive.

In an expedition against the Indians (1791) a battalion of four companies detached from the New Jersey Militia was called into service. As part of the 2nd Regiment, United States Army, it took part in the action against the Indians near Fort Recovery, Ohio, November 4, 1791.

The Pennsylvania Insurrection of 1794, commonly called "The Whiskey Rebellion", caused Congress to request the detachment of five regiments of troops, two of Cavalry and three of Infantry. These troops left the state on Sept. 22, marched to Carlisle and Pittsburgh, Pa., returned to New Jersey on Dec. 20, and were mustered out on Christmas Day, 1794. In this group was the foster organization of the famous Essex Troop of Cavalry, which was organized prior to the Revolutionary War, and was the personal escort of General Lafayette.

At that time, Governor Richard Howell assumed active command of the state forces. Brig. Gen. Anthony White, then New Jersey's Adjutant General, was placed in command of all Cavalry in the Army. Brig. Gen. Joseph Bloomfield commanded the New Jersey Brigade and Maj. Gen. Frederick Frelinghuysen took command of a Legion composed of Philadelphia Horse, McPherson Blues and several other units.

In the War of 1812, the militia did not participate in any battles. However, all calls were answered, often at considerable sacrifice, the men leaving homes and families, farms, various occupations and professions.

The General Orders of Aug. 12, 1814, of Governor William S. Pennington, announce the units called for service. According to the custom of the day, they were identified by the names of the commanders. Thus, such units as Capt. Golden's Artillery of Hopewell, Capt. Wilson's Jersey Blues of Trenton, and Capt. Ten Eyck's Riflemen of Freehold were mustered.

In the war with Mexico (1846-1848), five companies of Militia were detached for service. The entire force rendezvoused at Fort Hamilton, N.Y., on Sept. 27, 1847, and sailed for Vera Cruz, Mexico on Sept. 29, returning to New York in August 1849. In addition three companies of the 10th Regiment, United States Army, Companies E, G, and H, were recruited from the New Jersey Militia and were mustered into service during April and May 1847, sailing for Matamors, Mexico on April 11, and July 10, 1847, returning to New York for mustering out during August of 1848.

Bill Extends Education Eligibility

A bill which extends eligibility for higher education tuition assistance to certain former members of New Jersey National Guard and increases the number of tuition-free credits available to National Guard members and their dependents was signed into law by Governor Jon. S. Corzine on Jan. 24.

The legislation would allow National Guard members who are called into active duty to utilize state tuition assistance credits after their enlistment expires.

Under the old law, active members of the New Jersey National Guard may receive up to 15 credits per semester tuition free from public institutions of higher education in the State. Similarly, the child or surviving spouse of a National Guard member killed in the performance of his duties may also receive this benefit.

This bill, A-2542, amended the law to extend eligibility for this higher education tuition benefit to members of the New Jersey National Guard whose use of the free tuition benefit is interrupted by a deployment to active duty. The change would permit these soldiers to receive their earned educational benefits should their enlistment expire, or should they be medically discharged, prior to completing their studies.

The new law will also increase the number of credits eligible for funding under this program from 15 to 16 per semester.
