

INDIAN KING TAVERN

The Indian King Tavern in Haddonfield, New Jersey, was the first seat of government in our state.

In 1776 the first reading of the Declaration of Independence took place in the Indian King Tavern. After the reading, the leaders of the colony of New Jersey changed the name to the State of New Jersey.

It was here that the leaders also adopted the State Seal of New Jersey.

So New Jersey's government began in Haddonfield and moved to Trenton in 1790.

FIND THE CORRECT PATH TO THE INDIAN KING TAVERN

