Focusing on employment and housing for people who are deaf and hard of hearing
Over the past several weeks, DDHH participated in a number of events focusing on employment and housing for people who are Deaf and hard of hearing. In December, DDHH, along with the Division of Disability Services and the Commission for the Blind and Visually Impaired, was invited to the Office of the Lt. Governor. The resources available to businesses and companies in New Jersey, from the respective divisions to support employers and develop a diverse workforce that includes people with disabilities, was discussed at this meeting.

DDHH had the opportunity to share the numerous resources available from the division, as well as other service providers, that support employment for people who are Deaf and hard of hearing. DDHH talked about the educational and sensitivity workshops provided to enhance understanding of hearing loss and promote appreciation for diversity in the workplace. Assistive technology for people with hearing loss was also included in the discussion. The role of the division’s communication access services in assisting employers to locate interpreters and other communication access services was highlighted. The meeting was very productive, informing the Lt. Governor’s office of how DDHH is supporting employers who hire people who are Deaf and hard of hearing.

In January, DDHH participated in the State Housing Association Annual Meeting that was attended by numerous affordable housing developers. I participated on a panel to discuss the need for accessible affordable housing options for people who are Deaf, Deaf-blind and hard of hearing. The panel presentation resulted in many housing developers contacting DDHH with inquiries about the types of housing design and assistive devices required for people with hearing loss to live independently and safely. DDHH will meet with these housing developers during the upcoming weeks, with a goal of increasing affordable housing units in New Jersey accessible for people who are Deaf and hard of hearing.
Recently, I learned that induction loops are being installed in the New York City subway system and museums. Several stations are already looped, as is The American Museum of Natural History exhibit “Brain: The Inside Story.” Since New Jersey is so heavily influenced by Metro New York and Philadelphia, how do we get this technology into public venues around our state?

An induction loop system utilizes an electro-magnetic coil to create a magnetic field. Hearing aids or cochlear implants (CI) with t-coils receive the sound signal directly via their t-coil when the hearing aid or CI is switched from the microphone to “T” setting. On this setting, an individual is able to hear the person in the booth or on the other side of the call box directly through their hearing aid or CI. For those who do not yet have this technology, there are portable receivers.

As with any project of this scale, there are steps that need to be taken and some of them are already done or are in the works. Hearingloop.org (www.hearingloop.org) is hoping to loop America and their suggested steps can be applied on a local level.

The first suggested step is to equip telephones to broadcast t-coils. Since 1989 all landline telephones manufactured have been t-coil compatible and in 2003 the FCC mandated digital wireless phone companies and service providers to make t-coil compatible phones starting in 2005 and beyond.

Steps two and three involve demonstration communities such as Britain and northern European countries, such as Denmark, loop churches, cathedrals, theaters, customer service windows and taxi cabs. Stateside, Manhattan is becoming a local demonstration community on the east coast, and in the mid-west Holland-Zeeland, Michigan is a model looped community. Churches, businesses, schools and public venues have been looped and the initiative has spread to the western part of Michigan, including Grand Rapids.

If any individual house of worship or any public venue will install and advertise its loop system, more individuals will be motivated to request the t-coil technology in their hearing aids and CIs and spread the word. Knowing that t-coils will facilitate hearing in most of the community’s facilities, audiologists and hearing health providers will be motivated to support the initiative as they provide the next generation of hearing aids and CIs.

It is exciting that New York City is getting this technology installed in public forums. We are all anxious to see the success and growth. Loop systems can serve anyone anywhere, including ticket windows, airports, and other transient facilities. The Hearing Loss Association of America supports the national loop effort and the success of Metro New York’s program can only bode well for New Jersey.

Consumer Cellular and Hamilton Relay®
Premiere Mobile Captions Service™ for Customers With Hearing Loss

Submitted by Media Contact Jane Taber

Consumer Cellular (www.consumercellular.com), the exclusive wireless provider for AARP members, partnered with Hamilton Relay and Mobile Captions Company to launch Mobile Captions Service™ (MCS). Similar to closed caption on television, MCS enables persons who are deaf or hard of hearing to read typed captions of what is being said on a wireless phone display as the conversation is taking place.

Available exclusively through Consumer Cellular on the Nokia E5, MCS subscribers can speak, listen and read during a wireless phone conversation. The Nokia E5 smartphone is M3/T3 hearing aid-compatible and comes with a large, 2.4-inch display and full QWERTY keyboard making viewing and typing a breeze.

“Consumer Cellular is continuously looking for ways to better serve our customers, empowering them to lead independent, mobile lifestyles with easy-to-use devices and inexpensive calling plans,” said John Marick, Consumer Cellular CEO. “We hope customers using our new Mobile Captions Service will enjoy an improved mobile experience that allows them to stay in touch with friends and family from home, work or while on the move.”

How It Works

When customers place a call, the Nokia E5 automatically connects to Hamilton Relay Service. A specially-trained live operator known as a Communications Assistant (CA) begins typing – in real time – what the other person says. MCS subscribers can then read what is said directly on the screen of the Nokia E5, making it possible to catch every part of the conversation while on the go. The technology that supports MCS is known as Voice Carry Over (VCO). VCO allows individuals who are deaf or hard of hearing to utilize their speech on the telephone. Using Hamilton Relay Service, the VCO user speaks directly to the other person, and when the person speaks back, the CA types the response, which is then displayed on the device.

“This new mobile access for VCO users takes traditional telecommunications relay services to an entirely new level,” says Dixie Ziegler, vice president of Hamilton Relay. “We are excited about our partnership with Consumer Cellular and the introduction of Mobile Captions Service, and we look forward to expanding MCS offerings to additional markets in the future.” Consumer Cellular’s MCS is only offered in participating states where Hamilton Relay is the telecommunications relay service provider.

For information about participating states, how to purchase the Nokia E5 phone, or to be alerted when a new state signs on, visit www.consumercellular.com/mobilecaptions or call 1-888-725-4428.

A typical e-mail might involve advocacy...such as an alert about government policy that might call for a letter of support or complaint...or coping strategies, such as how to handle the stress of noisy holiday gatherings.

Other e-mails might cover entertainment options, such as schedules for captioned theater, movies or conferences...and updates on technology to help you get the most out of the fast-changing world of telephones and relay services, assistive listening devices and other aids for people with hearing loss. Plus, you can stay current on HLA-NJ chapter meetings and programs as well as national programs and meetings sponsored by the Hearing Loss Association of America. Who will benefit from these e-mails? People with hearing loss – and their friends and family, social service professionals and government officials.

AT&T Introduces Video Relay Service App for Deaf and Hard of Hearing Users on the App Store

App Allows Users to Make Video Relay Service Calls With iPhone

AT&T* announced a new video relay service (VRS) app for iPhone 4 that allows deaf and hard of hearing customers to make VRS calls. The AT&T VRS app is available on the App Store.

AT&T VRS is a service that allows a person who uses American Sign Language (ASL) to place a relay call to a hearing person by communicating through a certified ASL interpreter. AT&T has offered video relay services to customers for many years, but the new AT&T VRS app provides a more flexible and convenient way for users to make VRS calls on the go. iPhone 4 customers can make unlimited VRS calls using the AT&T VRS app at no additional cost.

“AT&T is committed to serving the deaf and hard of hearing communities, and our new AT&T VRS app is one more way we’re enhancing our offerings,” said Susan Johnson, senior vice president of AT&T Customer Information Services. “Now our customers can make a VRS call at Wi-Fi hotspots using iPhone 4, which makes VRS easier and more accessible for everyone.”

The AT&T VRS app is simple and easy to use. Users launch the app, log-in, and then can either choose to place a VRS call by selecting someone from their contact list or by manually dialing a number. The app contacts an AT&T ASL interpreter who then initiates a FaceTime video call with the user. The interpreter will connect the ASL user to the hearing person they are calling, and relays the conversation between the two parties through ASL.

In addition to the app, AT&T VRS also offers a free software download called AT&T Video Link that turns a computer or laptop into a video phone. This software works on certain Macs and PCs enabled with a web cam and a broadband connection.

AT&T VRS will also provide users with a 10-digit telephone number and supports all the FCC required 911 emergency capabilities.

The AT&T VRS app is available for free from the App Store on iPhone or at www.itunes.com/appstore/. For additional information about AT&T VRS, please visit www.att.com/vrs, or access AT&T VRS via video phone at ATTVRS.tv or 877-642-0877.

About Mobile Captions Company
Mobile Captions Company (MCC) an emerging technology and service company founded in 2009. MCC specializes in bringing enhanced mobile communications to people who are hard of hearing. MCC’s technology is a patent-pending, end-to-end system that allows captions (text) to be delivered to any MCC enabled cell phone over the cellular infrastructure. To learn more about Mobile Captions Company, go to www.mobilecaptions.com.
of Justice has proposed changing the important ADA mandates pertaining to captioned movies. They contend that only 50 percent of movies in the theaters should be captioned, a reduction which would relegate people with hearing loss to second-class status. The Alert referred readers to the Hearing Loss Association of America's website, www.hearingloss.org, for information on how to submit a letter to make your voice heard. You can take part in advocating on this and other issues, and stay in the loop. E-mail Arlene at info@hearingloss-nj.org and ask her to add your e-mail address to the HLA-NJ e-mail contact list for action alerts and other information affecting people with hearing loss.

Bring the Arts to People with Hearing Loss – Throughout 2010, HLA-NJ kept up a steady flow of news about captioned movies and live theater performances throughout New Jersey and New York. Support our efforts by treating yourself to captioned performances – many at discounted prices. And make sure the theater managers know you value these performances, and would like more.

College Scholarships – HLA-NJ awarded $1,000 college scholarships to three outstanding high school seniors with hearing loss. They are Amanda Hamlin, 18, of Paramus, freshman at the College of New Jersey; Lauren Payne, 18, of Basking Ridge, a freshman at Susquehanna University; and Max Mandel, 18, of Spotswood, a freshman at Middlesex County College. If you know young people who might qualify, suggest they or their parents contact HLA-NJ.

Information and Referral – We continued to provide free, expert assistance via info@hearingloss-nj.org, or phone numbers available at our website, www.hearingloss-nj.org. Contacts during 2010 ranged from a mother worried about her young child's hearing loss, to a man in his late 60s, who was in danger of losing his job because his hearing was declining. Do you know someone who needs help with hearing loss? Suggest contacting HLA-NJ.

New Book on Hearing Loss – HLA-NJ President Romoff has a new book due in March: Listening Closely: A Journey to Bilateral Hearing. It is available from Charlesbridge publishing (www.charlesbridge.com), www.amazon.com and bookstores. Her previous work, Hear Again—Back to Life with a Cochlear Implant is available from Amazon.com. Make sure your friends with hearing loss know about these important resources.

For HLA-NJ, one of the highlights of 2010 was the chance to join the Monthly Communicator community with this regular monthly column. Many thanks to Dr. David Alexander and to Alan Champion! This column has helped us link up with people with hearing loss across New Jersey. We look forward to getting to know even more Monthly Communicator readers in 2011; and hope you will continue to contact us with questions, concerns or comments, to join our mailing list or just to say hello.

To all Monthly Communicator readers, best wishes for the New Year.

The Family Resource Association provides sign language training for toddlers up to age three with hearing loss or disabilities. The individual instructor works with the toddler and the family together to facilitate family communication. This early intervention program is available to residents of Monmouth and Ocean counties. Hearing Council Seeks Members

The New Jersey Department of Health and Senior Services’ Early Hearing Detection and Intervention (NJ-EHDI) Program is seeking individuals representing some of the following groups to volunteer as new members of the Hearing Evaluation Council. The council provides ongoing advice to the NJ-EHDI Program regarding implementation of our state’s newborn hearing screening law and regulations.

New Jersey Public Law N.J.S.A. 26:2-103.1 et sec* mandates that a:

- board certified pediatrician;
- board certified otolaryngologist;
- audiologist with certified clinical competence;
- person who is profoundly Deaf;
- person who is hearing-impaired;
- hearing person of parents who are Deaf; and
- a citizen of the State who is interested in the concerns and welfare of the Deaf all serve on the Hearing Evaluation Council. The council will be appointed by the Commissioner of Health and Senior Services. Each member shall hold office for a term of two years and until each member’s successor is appointed and qualified.”

As noted in the Hearing Evaluation Council Bylaws (adopted, 2007), the purpose of the council is to ensure the reasonable implementation of universal newborn hearing screening for New Jersey’s most vulnerable citizens to advise the department regarding recognized activities and minimum standards of performance relative to newborn hearing screening, early detection of hearing loss, and early intervention for children identified with hearing loss as defined by the enabling statute to recommend to the department changes in the qualifications of persons administering early hearing detection and intervention programs, supervising personnel or performing newborn hearing screening or follow-up as technology, educational opportunities and/or professional requirements evolve to perform all other duties and in such manner as are, or may be, prescribed by law.

Any individual with an interest in New Jersey’s Universal Newborn Hearing Screening Program may apply. The program is especially in need of applicants to fill vacant positions in the roles of ‘audiologist’ and ‘citizen of the State who is interested in the concerns and welfare of the Deaf’ (particularly a parent of a young child with hearing loss).

Anyone interested should send a letter of interest indicating the specific position they are applying for, along with a resume, CV or a description of relevant attributes and experiences to:

Senior Housing Initiative Progresses

Submitted by Lucinda Brooks

Cardinal Capital Management (CCM) will work with the Senior Housing Committee, NJAD to develop two Deaf, Deaf/Blind and Hard of Hearing Senior Housing Projects in Morris County, NJ. One will be for low income seniors and one for seniors who can afford to buy their own unit. This year, the annual low income limit is $36,960 for one person and $42,240 for two people. The second project will be priced based on interest and area. The goal is one campus for both projects. The plan includes meeting rooms that could be used by social services and organizations in the Deaf, hard of hearing, late-deafened, and Deaf-blind communities.

Morris County was chosen based on population, safety, public transportation, hospitals and shopping. Work in 2011 will include putting together a development team, identifying community and government partners, start on tax credit applications, find investors and hopefully locate land in Morris County.

These projects require great patience and hard work for both CCM and the NJ Senior Housing Committee. The road is not easy or quick, but we are happy to get started. A fund raising campaign has the goal of raising $2 million, about 10 percent of the cost of the low income project.

We would appreciate it if anyone would like to initiate a fundraising project for the NJ Senior Housing. If your organization or you have some ideas or want to make a plan, please send an e-mail to Planning Chairperson Lucinda Brooks at LBrooks4@comcast.net who will help coordinate fundraising.
