LAWRENCEVILLE – The New Jersey National Guard responded to requests for assistance from local officials across the state as rescue residents trapped by rising floodwaters in the wake of Hurricane Irene.

From Netcong in Morris County to Woodbine in Cape May County, New Jersey National Guard Soldiers and Airmen in high water vehicles were dispatched to assist in efforts to rescue residents and to transport emergency and law enforcement officials.

Nearly 100 New Jersey Army National Guard Soldiers assisted authorities at two emergency shelters established on the Rutgers University Campus for residents displaced by Hurricane Irene.

Gov. Chris Christie visited the shelter at the Werblin Center on campus just after 4 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 27, to thank the residents for heeding his evacuation order and the National Guard troops for being part of the largest domestic mobilization in almost 30 years.

As the 450 shelter occupants settled onto cots and plugged cellular phones into outlets, Soldiers from Westfield-based Bravo Troop of the 102nd RSTA carried boxes of food into the cavernous gymnasium.

Capt. Eric Petrevich, the officer in charge, said his Soldiers were mobilized on Thursday and proud to be able to help fellow New Jerseyans displaced by the storm.

“We’re glad to be here and we’re here as long as they need us,” said Petrevich, who lives in High Bridge, Hunterdon County.

Atlantic County emergency management officials asked for National Guard assistance in transporting more than 200 cats and dogs from the old racetrack in Egg Harbor to the county's animal shelter in Pleasantville. Furthermore, a small contingent of Soldiers assisted Rowan University security police with campus patrols after Hurricane Irene passed.

Among the other municipalities where the National Guard responded:

- Lincoln Park, Morris County
- Paterson, Passaic County
- Hoboken, Hudson County
- Bound Brook, Somerset County
- Bridgewater, Somerset County
- Lodi, Bergen County
- Bellmawr, Camden County

In addition to supporting operation at the shelters in New Brunswick, nearly two dozen Army National Guard Soldiers assisted in the operation of a shelter at the Jersey City Armory and an additional 130 Air National Guard Airmen were deployed to the Izod Center to assist civilian authorities operating a shelter there.

In preparation for the hurricane, National Guard leaders established command centers at Lawrenceville and Warren Grove and launched 24-hour operations on Aug. 25, to position personnel, equipment and supplies at armories and installations at key locations including Teaneck, Somerset, Morristown, Riverdale, West Orange, Freehold, Joint Base McGuire-Dix-Lakehurst, Pomona and Vineland.

More than 300 military vehicles capable of navigating high water were staged in locations to ensure the quickest response times to areas forecast to experience the greatest storm impact. In addition, National Guard UH-60 Blackhawk helicopters were prepared to conduct aerial operations at the request of the Office of Emergency Management.

These Soldiers and Airmen were among more than 2,000 Army and Air National Guard Soldiers called to duty by Gov.

Chris Christie in response to the hurricane. It is the largest New Jersey National Guard domestic mobilization since Hurricane Gloria in 1985.

Although the Army and Air National Guard have mobilized more than 15,000 members for overseas operations over the past decade, the Guard has continued to train its force and to remain well prepared to respond to domestic operations in support of civilian authorities.

The New Jersey National Guard has more than 8,200 Soldiers and Airmen representing a cross-section of New Jersey. They hail from all 21 counties and continue the tradition established with the creation of the first militia in 1636 -- neighbors serving and protecting neighbors.

Tunnel to Towers Run registry

All New Jersey Guardsmen are invited to participate in the 10th Anniversary of Stephen Siller's "Tunnel to Towers Run" on Sept. 25.

Last year the New Jersey Army National Guard Recruiting and Retention Battalion was fortunate to partake in this now televised legendary 5K run that follows in the fate filled footsteps of a true hero.

The NJANG RRB is currently in the planning stages to participate in this year's run. Because of time constraints, they need to get a roster of individuals that are ready to commit to this year's event by a suspense date Sept. 9.

There will be limited free registration and transportation to and from the event to the first 90 Soldiers to respond. Based on response there will be two potential pick up locations; Joint Base McGuire-Dix-Lakehurst and Sea Girt.

Any member that is ready to commit should contact Mauricio R. Vega, National Guard career counselor, at 908-377-9898.

The "Tunnels To Towers" tribute event celebrates not only Stephen Siller's ultimate sacrifice, but recognizes all the sacrifices made by all of our 9-11 fallen heroes and those that have fought and continue to fight for the cause of freedom.
