(Click here)

Facilitators:

- Lori Outzs Borgen, Director, Center for Social Justice, Seton Hall School of Law
- Greer Luce, Chief Communications Officer, New Jersey Historical Commission
- Madeleine Rosenberg, Chief Public Historian, New Jersey Historical Commission
- Andrew Urban, Associate Professor of American Studies and History, Rutgers University–New Brunswick

Whether or not the results are still in process, the outcome of the 2020 U.S. presidential election and the ongoing struggle for voting rights will shape our conversations at this year's NJ History Conference. To provide a platform for framing the election and exploring it through constructive dialogue, we have scheduled time for breakout discussions at the end of the program. Please join us for informal, facilitated conversations to share your thoughts, ask questions, discuss context and implications, and connect with other conference attendees.
